

ABOUT US

Coast Community News is published weekly on a Friday by Central Coast Newspapers Pty Ltd (CCN), a local, family-owned business.

CCN publishes three local, independent newspapers – Coast Community News, the Coast Community Pelican Post and the Coast Community Chronicle – distributed via more than 450 distribution points right across the Central Coast.

Most of our stories, as well as our digital programs such as "Friday 5@5", can be viewed online at www.coastcommunitynews.com.au

CCN aims to serve the interests of the community in three important ways:

1. To serve the ultimate purpose of the free press in a democracy, that is, to hold powerful interests to account through high-quality, independent journalism without fear or prejudice;
2. To provide an affordable medium for local businesses to advertise their products and services, including discounted rates for eligible not-for-profit organisations; and,
3. To keep the community informed about local issues and ensure that important public notices are available to ALL members of the community irrespective of their socio-economic circumstances.

Our content is originated through both our own team of local journalists as well as external sources, including media releases, websites and public notices.

All our news content is subject to strict editorial standards – see www.coastcommunitynews.com.au/aboutus/editorialstandards

Wherever possible, our news includes source lines that provide information about where information was sourced so that readers can judge for themselves the veracity of what they are reading.

Each paper focuses specifically on an area bound by postcodes as follows:

Coast Community Pelican Post - Post Codes 2256 and 2257; Coast Community News - Post Codes 2250, 2251, 2260; and Coast Community Chronicle - Post Codes 2258, 2259, 2261, 2262 and 2263.
